LATEST NOTES ABOUT THE FASHIONS

[From the N Y Evening Post]

Jumbo gray is the latest shade of that color

It is considered in bad style to wear the crinolette or bustle close up to the waist, it must be fastened some inches below it to be in fashionable position

Jersey bodices of cut blue, mauve color, rose, cream, or pale gray are worn with white satin skirts trimmed with tinted lace the tint corresponding with the color of the jersey

Brown Scotch tweed is an exceedingly fashionable material for travelling dresses this year The new brown is a shade between the tints of copper and bronze, and is very handsome in effect

Eglantine pink, lemon colored, and pale blue cashmere tea dresses, profusely trimmed with cream white lace and silk embroidery are the prettiest dresses for the warm season which have yet appeared

The wide Tyrolese and Gainsborough hats rival the London Witch and Queen Mab bonnets in general favor, while the close little cap bonnets beloved by French women are smaller, flatter, and more fashionable than ever Among a number of pretty French bonnets is a Gipsy shape made of Tuscan lace of an unusually yellow hue Outside is a wreath of scarlet honeysuckles and a bunch of perfumed Isabella roses The lace crown is covered with amber beads and the strings are of yellow net worked with beads and caught together by a bit of scarlet honeysuckle

The most fashionable styles in walking costumes are those which show a perfectly plain skirt formed of some rich material gored in French fashion, thus giving it the cacaht seen upon no other skirt Around the bottom is placed a full "crimpant" outside ruching which constitutes the only trimming. Above this is worn a short polonaise with full short poufs at the side, or a pointed bodice and tunic with panniers To be worn with these are hand some jackets or visites to correspond Later on, shoulder capes—Incroyable, Vandyke, Mother Hubbard Quaker and Carrack—will take the place of these wraps Pelerines of every description are to be more in vogue than ever the coming season

Various shades of gray will be much worn in the coming season Steel gray will be adopted by elderly ladies while softer hues showing a sheen of pearl or silver, will be used for youthful wearers A very handsome dress, designed for a stately matron in this city, is made of "winter sky" silk, with Louis XIV bodice of the same, and panniers of rich black lace Over the shoulders is draped a large bertha of the same lace A second dress is of the most delicate shade of silver gray satin, with a triple plaited ruche around the foot of the skirt The sharply peaked bodice is trimmed with pearl beaded point applique lace The sleeves are very tight to the arm, and over these are to be drawn a very long pair of silver gray dressed kid gloves, which are to reach to just above the elbow

Fashion is running wild over embroideries of every kind, and this trimming is used with a lavish hand upon toilets designed for every occasion Morning dresses of pale colored surah, veiling, vigogne, and summer cashmere show exquisite designs in Venetian openwork, Grecian patterns in superb oriental coloring blended with gold or silver threads, and floral designs with blossom and foliage of nature's own counterpart in size and hue Whole dresses of lace are completely covered with embroidery to be worn over princesse slips of tinted surah A "Vallerie costume exhibited uptown has an underskirt of amber satin with an overdress of amber net, embroidered with golden wheat-heads, wood mosses, and bouquets of shaded poppies. The overdress is looped back with amber clasps and edged with a fall of amber chenille fringe, flecked with shining beads of ruby, green and amber

Cashmere trimmed with moire, satin, or velvet will be much worn for demi-toilet, and even for evening dress, as the new spring importations show very novel and attractive shades of color in these fabrics These goods will be in great vogue especially in the rich artistic shades of olive, golden brown, royal blue, and dark laurel green The most expensive of these are finished on one side with a handsome bordering wrought in Persian, Egyptian, or Pompadour designs in bright contrasting colors For home wear in these patterns are shown those of a soft doe color with a Persian bordering in black, Indian red, and green, with faint dashes of gold. These bordered dresses are made up most effectively into tea gowns fashioned a la Watteau "Oriental" cashmere, an Indiana cloth, a fine woollen fabric of purely British manufacture, is also a very popular variety of cashmere goods, which is often made up in conjunct on with Algerian plaided or striped surah. An imported model made of these fabrics has a short round skirt of dark blue "Oriental" cashmere with shell plaited flounces shirred at the top, making a double heading to each. Above this is a tunic of Algerian striped surah which is laid in full plaits underneath the sharp-pointed bodice. In the back, the tunic is of the same f-colored material, as is also the bodice, which is open up the front, lacing over a chemisette of the Algerian striped surah. The sleeves are laced up the back to correspond.

A stylish carriage dress is made of dark green satin with a short visite of the same lined with gray silk and closed with silver buttons The Buckingham tunic opens over a round underskirt trimmed with satin plaitings and is caught midway on the front of the skirt with a large bow of satin ribbon with floating ends The Vandyke hat of dark green satin braid is trimmed with moss green feather tips and a cluster of blush roses

For a short summary of the fashions we chronicle first that the "Worth" visite takes the lead in the long list of new spring wraps, and that short dresses are to be pre eminently the style for even full dress occasions, a recent large opening of imported toilets showing not a single trained dress, although many of the costumes were made of the richest brocade, satin, and velvet Economical ladies about to invest in a new "best" suit are advised to purchase a black gros grain silk of the best quality, which is cheaper in the end than a pattern from the bargain" counter at half price, and to trim it with black lace and jet beaded passementeries, jet having lost none of its prestige in Paris So a lady on this side the water is safe for a year to come at least A "Worth" visite of the silk trimmed with lace and passementerie to match, and a black straw or lace bonnet trimmed with jets or a spray of some bright French flowers with strings of watered ribbon, will constitute an elegant, durable, and a ways appropriate costume to wear throughout the year for best" Formerly a sash and a young girl were as closely connected in our ideas as a teething baby and an india rubber ring The former conjunction we are now taught by la mode to dissociate in a measure, for pointed waists and broad sashes are increasingly worn by women of every age and size Medium length basque bodices seem to be be going out of fashion for if not extremely long the basque, so called, hardly deserves the name, being pointed in front and very much cut up over the hips All head trimming is exceedingly fashionable, and pearl embroidery especially so At one time real or imitation pearls were considered wholly unsuitable for day wear, but things have changed in this respect and now strings of pearls are worn around the throat at any hour A lady driving in the park recently had a dainty princess bonnet, entirely covered with large cream white pearls, there being no other trimming but a cluster of white chenille hyacinths on the side

The counsel of James Burnham of Greene, who was indicted for criminal libel in causing to be published in the columns of the Journal, a bogus notice of a marriage of parties in Greene, filed a demurrer to the indictment in the S J Court at Auburn, Friday morning The fact that the respondent caused the notice to be published is not denied but it is argued that the act of the respondent was not a criminal libel The proceeding was pro forma and the demurrer was over ruled by the Court, in order to bring the case to the law court

Professor E. S Morse, a graduate of Bowdoin and a native of Maine, whose brilliant lecture on Japan before the Lowell Institute, in Boston, last winter, gave so much pleasure, proposes to start for Japan on Monday next, on a seven months' tour of observation and study The trustees of Peabody Academy of Science have granted him a leave of absence, and during his travels he will collect ethnological material for the museum at Salem He will return by way of China, India and Europe A book on household art and one on the early pottery of Japan will probably be among the fruits of this journey. Professor Morse is one of the most ardent and enterprising of our younger generation of scientists. His devotion to Japan and the Japanese amounts almost to a passion, not only on account of the material to be found among them for ethnological and sociological studies, but also on account of their native refinement, amiable qualities and liberal and progressive minds. His ties of interest in Japan are strengthened by the circumstance that I was during his stay there that he made some valuable discoveries in regard to progressive changes in the ancient mollusean fauna which attracted the attention of European evolutionists and the warm personal esteem and indorsement of Charles Darwin himself.—Portland Press.

John Pollock, who took passage on steamship Circassia, at Portland, as a steerage passenger, committed suicide before the steamer arrived at Halifax, Saturday. He had $260 in gold, beside a watch and a well filled chest of clothes.

Hancock.

Standing upon Commercial wharf, Boston, and looking through the forest of masts, one would be somewhat startled to see what might at first be taken for a clump of green bushes. A closer scrutiny would show them to be poles with a tuft of green at one end, piled up upon a wharf They are spruce poles, used principally for bean poles also for making weirs, and occasionally for fancy fences, arbors and other rustic work. They are brought upon the decks of schooners from Ellsworth, Me, and are cut during the winter in swampy places, so that the ground must be frozen hard to reach them For some forty years the headquarters of these poles has been at the Eastern packet pier, and some 1500 dozen are sold each spring season. The demand of course depends upon the run of the taste of people, and as many as 2500 to 3000 dozen have been sold The price for old tary lots is 30 to 40 cents with larger lots at 20 cents Spruce poles used for light masts for boats and vessels boat hooks and broom handles and a hundred and one other things, are also brought from Ellsworth, Me, and range from $10 to $30 per 100

A SOUTHERN VIEW OF THE YANKEE

[From the Report of Judge Key's Lecture in The Chattanooga Commercial]

The Judge then passed to the consideration of the Yankee socially, prefacing his remarks by saying that no man South had imbibed and fostered stronger prejudices against our Yankee friends than he He had seen the Yankee in all the busy avocations of life in every variety of business political and home association, and of the impressions so formed he desired mainly to speak in the plainest and simplest manner He would go to New England to find in their town meetings the purest democracy in the world and contrasted the New England town meeting where all the citizens met and took part in the local legislation each township corresponding with our civil districts levying, collecting and expending its own taxes with our burdensome County Court system The speaker spoke in admiring terms of the simplicity economy and effectiveness of the New England system, its great effect as a capital school for teaching the principles of practical government, its freedom from narrow partisan ends jobbery and fraud, its pure business character and stated that the towns system had done more than any other agency to infuse into New England that pluck energy activity and force which has placed her in the forefront of the Nation in achievement and prosperity"

The lecturer had been particularly impressed with the home life of the Yankee, his good houses their convenience and neatness thorough repair fresh painted fences and outbuildings More especially he spoke of the manner in which the mistress of the house performed her duties—neatness order and good taste prevailing throughout her domain "She is always prepared for anything and company cannot take her by surprise" He told of some pleasing incidents in his own experience to illustrate how women of highest mental power educational attainments social refinement and even of great wealth took pride in their ability to enter the kitchen and prepare a meal fit for a king or any other mortal A wealthy merchant had stated to him that he desired his daughter to be independent in her own household when she had one, to be queen of the kitchen as well as the parlor and the lecturer commented "In the multitude of charms and accomplishments which bone in the diadem of the Yankee wife and girl whom I have mentioned, not one glittered less brightly on account of their practical knowledge and discharge of household duties but, on the contrary, added a lustre to the light which caused all to beam with greater effulgence" In every house, newspapers and magazines were to be found The Yankee reads both sides and generally takes two newspapers of his own political faith and the best and strongest of the opposite party, and is always ready to meet an argument He is good natured under the free criticism They laugh at the gibes and abuse of our newspapers and politicians, and continue to manufacture goods for our markets

The lecturer denied the common charge that the Yankee lacks in hospitality While not so diffusive and demonstrative as the Southerner, he is none the less earnest, and in his quiet, noiseless way, most careful, kind and considerate On this subject the Judge referred simply and approbatively to the consideration he had received at the hands of ex-Senator Hamlin's family, in Bangor as exemplifying the careful and unostentatious manner of Yankee hospitality, in which instance the Senator had been attacked by a Democratic paper for entertaining an ex-rebel brigadier had responded to the attack at a Republican meeting (it was during a heated political canvass), and had referred to his guest in most complimentary terms, while neither Judge Key nor his family were allowed to know of the incident, which might have marred their visit, until after they left Bangor and accidentally saw Mr. Hamlin's speech in print

The speaker stated that no doubt his hearers thought his opinion of the Yankee generally favorable, and would inquire whether he had no faults. Yes he had his full share of faults, but he preferred not to dwell upon his failings, until he had exhausted the good that might be said of him and as much as he had said, much remained to say. He told the anecdote of the kind-speaking neighbor Smith and his bad neighbor Jones, and preferred to represent Smith.

After having seen the Yankee at his fireside, his table, in his workshop, on his farm, at his counter—everywhere, he had concluded that he is a good fellow, and he liked him. "I have grasped his hand, looked him in the eye, and said to him, 'Our quarrel is ended We are friends! My regard for him in no wise diminishes my respect, sympathy and affection for the people of this section of the country, with whom my life has been passed, to whom I owe so much, and with whom the remnant of life will be spent. MR. BLAINE'S VINDICATION.

[From the Boston Journal.]

At length, after days and weeks of gossip, slander and false accusation by Shipherd and others, Mr. Blaine has had opportunity to vindicate himself. That he has done it, in the most thorough and emphatic manner no fair-minded person can deny. Not by his own word alone, but by an array of testimony that is overwhelming, Mr. Blaine has proved that all of Shipherd's so-called testimony is a tissue of falsehoods, inspired seemingly by a determination to be revenged upon the men who pronounced his scheme visionary and refused to lend their official influence to further his plans. It will always be a mystery to many why Shipherd was permitted to occupy the attention of the committee so long when its members must have been aware that his statements were improbable. If it were the design of the committee to permit Shipherd to pile falsehood upon falsehood and improbability upon improbability in order that those he accused might have a better opportunity to vindicate themselves, it certainly has accomplished that purpose.

It is somewhat remarkable that since those whom Shipherd has accused have proved him to be a scandal-monger and adventurer that it is remembered that he ruined a Chicago savings bank some years since and later purchased an embarrassed railroad in New York, paying for it with his notes, and which, after operating it as long as he could pay employes and running expenses by the same means, reverted to the original owners with a million dollars of additional debt. And yet this man, whose own account of himself was not flattering and who attributed to Mr. Blaine such idiocy as the "go in steve" story implied, was listened to, if not believed, by many newspapers. It is not worth while to name them now, but those whose editors have any doubt about the matter can consult their files for evidence either of their folly or whatever else they may be pleased to call it.

Indeed, some showed a disposition to believe the improbable story of this self-convicted falsifier even after Mr. Hurlbut pronounced the story, so far as he was concerned, a falsehood. We regret that it is so; but the eagerness of certain journals to make the public believe these calumnies even after their author was well known, leads one to suspect that they would have been most happy to have them proved to be true. They were certainly very zealous in their efforts to make the public believe them. We speak of this matter because during the next week this man Shipherd will be excoriated by the press, and, doubtless, by the same journals which were so anxious to bolster him up two weeks ago. And yet it was the applause of these papers which encouraged that remarkable person to invent new falsehoods and new improbabilities. It is probable that steps may be taken to punish Shipherd for perjury, but what will be said of the offence of those journals which, by giving credence to his falsehoods, joined him in his efforts to assassinate the reputations of prominent men both living and dead?

PATTI AND MAPLESON.

A New York despatch says: Although Adelina Patti is said to have signed a contract with Henry E. Abbey for next season, it now appears to be definitely settled that she will sing in Italian opera in this city next season as the principal artist of Col. Mapleson's troupe. Negotiations were begun between Mapleson and Patti soon after the great singer's arrival in this country in the winter, but the preliminaries were not fully arranged when Patti returned to Europe, and Franchi, her agent, remained here to represent her in the negotiations. The director of the opera was to deposit $42,000 as a guarantee, to be paid to the singer at the opening of the season in October, and to bind himself by contract to pay $4400 a night for her services. Mapleson has successfully terminated the negotiations. To meet the additional expenses of the season entailed by the engagement it became necessary for Mapleson first to raise the $42,000 to be deposited, and secondly to increase the price of seats and to propose to the stockholders that they should bear a proportion of the extra expense, either by paying something like half price for their free seats, or consenting to relinquish them on certain nights in each week. The $42,000 was raised by subscription among the stockholders and other persons interested in opera. Mapleson proposes to charge $10 for a box seat, and, as he has at his disposal for sale 30 boxes, with from four to six seats each, he will get therefore from this source alone at least $1200 per night, or, for the 30 Patti nights, $36,000. Mapleson has already sold the Patti season of three nights in Cincinnati for $24,000, and he also has a guarantee from Tyson and Bullmah, the ticket speculators, that they will take over $50,000 worth of tickets, or something like $25,000 worth apiece.

Ex-Gov. William R. Marshall, of Minn., is the Republican candidate for City Treasurer of St. Paul.

THE PERUVIAN CLAIM.

Mr. Blaine Cuts Shipherd Into Shreds.

WASHINGTON, April 24. The announcement that Mr. Blaine would appear before the Foreign Affairs Committee this morning in connection with the pending investigation not only insured a prompt attendance of the members of the committee, but attracted a crowd which soon filled the committee rooms and blocked up the corridor immediately adjoining. Admission to the rooms was mostly restricted to members of Congress and the press.

Mr. Blaine arrived at 10.40, and after a brief conference with Chairman Williams took his seat at the foot of the committee table and produced a large portfolio of papers and documents, after which he was sworn, and Chairman Williams put the inquiries. "Do you know Jacob R. Shipherd? Have you read his testimony?" to which witness replied, "I do; I have read his testimony, and have endeavored to understand it." Mr. Blaine then asked that the resolution authorizing the investigation be read, which was done.

Mr. Blaine then stated, in substance, that he never saw or knew of the letters in the State Department until Mr. Shipherd was introduced to him (Blaine) by Senator Blair. Until then he had never seen the man nor heard of him until the 25th of July. Mr. Blaine then explained the method of disposing of papers in the State Department, which would account for his previous statement, and added, "Such trashy matters as the Shipherd letters would never be called to the attention of the head of a great department, as they were scarcely fit for the waste basket."

Representative Kasson asked: "Do you know how they came to be missing from the files?"

Answer—"I don't know a thing about it; I know as little of it as the child unborn; they were not addressed to me, but were simply routine matters referred in the ordinary course of business. One would suppose I had passed the summer with him. As a matter of fact, in regard to the interview which it was alleged that I had with Mr. Shipherd on being introduced to him by Senator Blair on the 25th of July, so far from that interview lasting until late at night it lasted only about fifteen minutes; then I excused myself on the ground of important business, and the interview was postponed until the next morning, and I did not see Shipherd at or that or near of him till the 12th of October." Mr. Blaine continued "After Mr. Shipherd has had his full say as to what the policy of the Government has been toward him it occurs to me that the best course for the committee to pursue would be to inquire from the department what that policy was."

Mr. Blaine then proceeded to read the letter in which he stated was the entire correspondence between himself and Gen. Hurlbut, during his administration at Lima. "Shipherd came to me and stated he was the representative of a very important claim, called the Cochet claim. I had never before heard of it, and asked him how he spelled the name. He told me Senator Blair was one of his counsel and also added the names of ex-Senator Conkling, Hon. Scott Lord, ex-Senator Cragin and others. I thought this a very strong array of counsel. He named about a dozen prominent financiers and bankers, including the Messrs. Seligman, Morton, Bliss & Co. and others. I mention these facts, en passant, because I have been criticised for not kicking Shipherd out of the department the first morning he called, but when a man comes introduced by a United States Senator with three ex-Senators and an ex-Secretary of the Treasury as counsel, and an array of backers such as he mentioned, it would hardly be the custom of the department to kick him out on sight. This explains why I did not do what I virtually did later, and for not doing which earlier I have been severely criticised."

Mr. Blaine then related the points of his conversation with Shipherd in which he (Shipherd) read what he claimed to be the opinion of ex-Secretary Evarts to the effect that Cochet could claim one-third of the guano. Mr. Blaine said with much emphasis: "I would be willing to take the most solemn oath that President Garfield died without ever having heard of this vile scheme or ever having heard the name of Cochet mentioned." Witness two next day called Mr. Trescott's attention to the matter, and the latter at his (Mr. Blaine's) dictation wrote a despatch. Mr. Blaine then proceeded to read the entire correspondence between the Department of State and Minister Hurlbut touching the Cochet claim. In the latter part of July the despatch just mentioned was written to Mr. Hurlbut as follows: "Through the American bondholders or their attorneys you will no doubt be placed in possession of the facts regarding this claim, but you will take no step toward committing the Government thereto until you have received further definite instruction."

On the 22nd of September Mr. Hurlbut replied: "I acknowledge the receipt of your despatch. As to the Cochet claim, this legation has nothing but vague statements toward the creating of a commercial enterprise, and can take no judicial action. I have been favored with two letters, to which I reply by this mail, asking information as to the origin and extent of this claim." On the 17th of November Mr. Blaine replied: "Your No. 12, in reference to the Landreau claim, received. In regard to this subject I become convinced that there was not even a preliminary inquiry necessary. There is no just ground upon which this Government can intervene. If American citizens purchased an interest in this claim they purchased nothing more than the original purchasers possessed. They did not purchase the good offices of this Government, and you are instructed not to extend to them those offices."

On November 2 another despatch was received from Mr. Hurlbut, which crossed Mr. Blaine's answer to Mr. Hurlbut's previous despatch, in which he says: "I wrote to the Department in my No. 12 my opinions on the Crochet claim, in which Mr. Shipherd and his associates relied. I have also written to Mr. Shipherd and have pointed out to him the utterly defective proofs to the possessions. The whole matter rests upon assumptions. First—It is not true in fact that Cochet discovered either of these claims. They have been used for an hundred years. Second—It is not true that Peru ever recognized him in such capacity. Third—It is not true in fact that they descended to his son. I am inclined to doubt his sanity as to truthfulness."

Mr. Blaine said that in answer to this despatch, on Dec. 5 he wrote Mr. Hurlbut as follows: "Your 25 in relation to the Cochet claim, is duly received. I have pleasure in expressing my appreciation of your course as detailed therein, and especially your action in sending hitherto the correspondence in the case. Perhaps I should mitigate somewhat the severity of my language in view of the possibility of the fact that Mr. Shipherd is not wholly in his right mind."

MR. BLAINE'S RELATIONS WITH SHIPHERD.

This ended the correspondence between the State Department and Minister Hurlbut in the Cochet claim, and Mr. Blaine proceeded further to address the committee as to his relations with Mr. Shipherd. He continued: "Mr. Trescott looked over the matter to see if there was any claim to the property, as was claimed by Mr. Shipherd upon Mr. Evarts's opinion, and found there was nothing in it. Subsequently, I had a conversation with Mr. Elmore, which fully satisfied me on the subject.

Mr. Belmont inquired, "Was there not a subsequent despatch?"

Mr. Blaine explained that the Peruvian Company survived the Cochet claim and Mr. Shipherd informed him that ex-Senators Conkling and Eaton would soon start for Peru in its interests, and after that he wrote the despatch such as would always be given where Americans of high rank were interested. In the case of the Cochet claim it was found to be a Peruvian claim, in behalf of which the department could not under any circumstances use its offices; but the Peruvian Company, being an American company, was entitled to the kind offices of our Minister in any investigations that might be made in Peru in their behalf. In regard to Shipherd's story about the $250,000 bribe offered to Mr. Hurlbut and his (Shipherd's) statement that he told him (witness) about it and took the opinion of all his counsel about it, Mr. Blaine said he had written to the several gentlemen mentioned by Shipherd and would read to the committee the correspondence.

Witness wrote to Senator Blair asking if he remembered to have heard Mr. Shipherd in his (Blaine's) presence mention any offer of $250,000 of stock to Minister Hurlbut, and received the following reply, which he read:

WASHINGTON, April 10, 1882.

Hon. James G. Blaine.

Dear Sir: I never heard Mr. Shipherd state to you that he had offered Mr. Hurlbut $250,000 of stock. I never heard that he made such an offer until I read it in the published reports of his evidence before the Foreign Affairs Committee.

(Signed) HENRY W. BLAIR.

Mr. Blaine then read his letter to ex-Secretary Boutwell making the same inquiry, and the latter's reply that he had never heard Shipherd say that he had offered Hurlbut $250,000. He also read similar letters of denial from Mr. Scott Lord, ex-Senator Cragin and Mr. William H. Robertson, and raised a general laugh by adding, "There is a very large lie out there, and I don't think it will require a very searching investigation to locate it." Mr. Blaine then read his (Blaine's) correspondence with ex-Secretary Evarts, in which the latter denied that Mr. Shipherd had any authority for quoting him in anyway; that he had never given any opinion or been asked to give any whatever in regard to the Cochet claim; that he was absent in Europe and did not know until his return and then only through the public prints, that Mr. Shipherd had been using his name. "I have not," said Mr Blaine, "the slightest hesitation in saying that this man Shipherd should be sent before a grand jury. It is that unpalliated perjury on his part that ought to be properly punished." Mr. Blaine then read a letter from Mr. Elmore in response to a letter from himself (Blaine) making inquiry in relation to Shipherd's version of the conversation between him (Shipherd) and himself (Elmore), in which Mr. Elmore said that he had carefully read Mr. Shipherd's version, and with the exception of two facts it was false in every particular. The one fact was that after repeated importunities on his part I permitted him an introduction. The second fact was that I furnished him with copies of the financial contracts of the Credit Industrial with the Peruvian Government that he might see that the company had an honorable and understood standing with Peru. With these exceptions his description of the interview is false in every particular. In regard to my alleged statement that I had scrawled a marginal note, "Go in, Steve," I undertake to assure you that it is absolutely false.

Chairman Williams reminded the witness that he had not yet supplemented this statement of Mr. Elmore with any denial of his own, to which Mr. Blaine quickly responded, "Oh, Oh, it is an absolute, detestable, out-of-whole-cloth lie, and I don't think the man is of sound mind."

Mr. Blaine then desired to say something in relation to the interview between Shipherd and Hurlbut, inasmuch as Shipherd's version involved the good name of the dead President and the dead Minister. He then read Shipherd's version, and with the remark, "With both of these gentlemen dead it may be a matter of some difficulty to dispose of these statements except inferentially, but I believe them to be the grossest falsehoods and will endeavor to show it to be the case." He then pointed out the absurdity of Shipherd's version that he met Mr. Hurlbut by the latter's appointment and that they sat upon a sofa in the public corridor and held such an interview as Shipherd described, and utterly discredited any other explanation than that Shipherd, seeing by the papers that Mr. Hurlbut was at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, waylaid him and secured a merely casual chat in the public hall. Mr. Blaine characterized in most forcible language the assumption of Shipherd in assuming to speak for President Garfield as simply infamous, and vehemently declared that he was prepared to take the most solemn oath, so firm were his convictions, that President Garfield went to his death without ever having seen or heard of Shipherd or his claim.

MR. BLAINE ADDRESSES HIMSELF TO MR. BELMONT.

Mr Blaine then called attention to the printed testimony taken before the committee, and read two or three questions proposed to Shipherd by Representative Belmont, and asked that gentlemen where in his (Blaine's) despatches he found any such language or implication as he (Belmont) had put into his mouth?

Mr. Belmont declined to discuss the matter, except at the proper time, which he thought would be upon the cross-examination.

Mr. Blaine replied that he desired to call the gentleman's attention to the matter, as he declared any such expressions as the gentleman (Belmont) had put into his mouth. He then read from the evidence one of Mr. Belmont's questions, in which he quoted an inquiry with, "The retiring Secretary wrote his last despatch on the 19th of December, in which he says in effect that there shall be no treaty between Chili and Peru unless the Landreau claim is considered." Now, said Mr. Blaine, I would be obliged if the gentleman will read from my despatch and not from his notes, and he will find what I did say. I said to Mr. Hurlbut, while disabusing the mind of the Chilian Government of any impression that the United States meditates any interference, yet justice would seem to demand that Landreau should be entitled to a hearing before any settlement is made which involves a cession of territory, which is quite another thing from what the gentleman puts into my mouth.

Mr. Belmont—I am not responsible for the report.

Mr. Blaine—Then you are incorrectly reported.

Mr. Belmont—No; I think I am correctly reported. I mean by "in effect" the whole tenor of your despatch.

Mr Blaine—But you have used quotation marks, which implies the use of my language. I never used any such language.

Mr. Belmont—But I did not put the quotation marks there.

Mr. Blaine—But this evidence was printed at the Government printing office.

Do you not read the proof?

Mr. Belmont—Only carelessly.

Mr Blaine—Well, I should say very carelessly.

Mr. Belmont—I do not care to enter into a discussion at this time. I am responsible for the language used in my questions.

Mr. Blaine—Certainly. I have called the gentleman's attention to what I did say, and to what he has attributed to me that I did not say.

At quarter past 12 the committee adjourned till 10 A. M. on Wednesday, when the examination of Mr. Blaine will be resumed.

PERSONAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

Twenty States will choose Governors this year.

There are now seventy-seven elephants in the country.

A list of 42 circuses is published which have taken the road this season.

Ex-Gov. Stewart, of Vermont, is to be the Decoration Day orator in Brandon, that State.

Major-General Hancock will deliver the diplomas at the Fortress Monroe Artillery School this year.

Stephen Fiske, who has given great vigor and journalistic skill to the New York Star has just resigned the editorship of that journal.

Miss Virginia Cameron, the second daughter of the Senator, is engaged to marry, it is reported, Lieut. Rodgers, son of Admiral Rodgers.

Joseph Jefferson, the actor, has presented to his life-long friend, Attorney General Brewster, a fine view of a Southern landscape, painted by himself.

The strawberry beds of Santa Clara county, Cal., produce three crops in the year, of which the second is the best. The third is often for sale as late as Christmas.

The resignation of Professor Sanborn, who has occupied a chair in Dartmouth College for nearly half a century, was accepted last week by the trustees of that institution.

Five inches of snow fell at Sheboygan on Thursday. We believe it was Sheboygan which was once spoken of as a place where "the sleighing isn't first rate for a spell in August."

Mr. Blaine's oration upon the life and character of President Garfield has been engrossed upon a sheet of Bristol-board by a resident of Philadelphia who intends to present the result of long and patient labor to Mrs. Garfield.

A picture of Dred Scott, the slave who was made famous by his connection with a Supreme Court decision which remanded him to slavery, was presented to the Missouri Historical Society last week by the widow of Theodore Barnum, who purchased Scott's manumission.

A deed just recorded in the office of the County Clerk at Albany conveys from Chester A. Arthur and others to Elizabeth M. Klinker, of Albany, ten acres of land and the buildings thereon, except a hothouse, in the town of Watervliet. The consideration named is $3,000. The property thus conveyed is known as the Arthur homestead.

By way of ridiculing that worthy creature the average Connecticut legislator some American wag declared that the first performance of a Greek play at Hartford not long ago there was a loud cry of "Author! Author!" from a member of the House, to whom the manager quietly explained that Sophocles had just gone out. This harmless joke now derives international importance from its publication as an actual if not a solemn fact in The London Echo.

The Biddeford Union and Journal says: The Republican County Committee held a meeting in the City Building, Saco, Thursday afternoon. There was a full attendance. But little business was transacted, but the political situation in the county was thoroughly discussed and there was perfect unanimity in agreeing that the outlook for the fall campaign was better than two years ago and that old York can be depended upon for a good Republican majority.

E church opens in this city to morrow, with bishop E G Andrews of New York, presiding About 150 clergymen of the denomination are already present and the attendance promises to be unusually large. This evening the Methodist church was thronged at their union prayer meeting, led by L Martin of Hallowell

WILMINGTON N C April 25. The schooner Mercy F Trundy, of Calais from Philadelphia with a cargo of 190 tons of railroad iron, is ashore on Frying Pan shoals It is reported she is broken in two and the vessel and cargo will be a total loss

FORTY-SEVENTH CONGRESS—First Session

Senate

WASHINGTON April 25. The calendar was taken up and after passing several minor bills the Senate resumed consideration of the Mississippi river improvement bill The appropriation $6 000 000 All the pending amendments to increase the appropriation and apply part of the money for the benefit of the levee system were withdrawn and the bill passed by viva voce vote without objection

The House Chinese bill was then taken up The amendments reported by the Foreign Relations Committee up to the last section 14 and 15—were agreed to

Mr Cullom criticized some of the phraseology of the bill and thought the language should be such as to prevent any objectionable to which Mr Hoar say said the same criticism would apply to the whole bill

The Committee amendment striking out section 14 which prohibits the naturalization of Chinese was rejected—yeas 26, nays 32, and the section retained

The Committee amendment striking out section 15 which defines the words Chinese laborers to mean both skilled and unskilled laborers and Chinese employed in mining was carried—yeas 29, nays 28

The amendments having been gone through with in Committee of the Whole the bill was reported to the Senate with calls for a separate vote on some of the amendments

Mr Hoar while believing the measure was destined to pass it was his conviction that public opinion and intelligence would sooner or later demand a reversal of the policy contemplated

Mr Morgan construed the President's debate in the recent veto that there are parts in this country where the Chinese can be profitably employed, as many of them are to be employed in competition with negroes He characterized the President's professions of consideration and friendship for the colored race, in view of this declaration as arrant hypocrisy.

Discussion was then suspended until to-morrow Adjourned

House

Several resolutions were introduced and referred

The contested election case of Lynch vs Chalmers was called up, but the House, by a vote of 97 yeas 121 nays, refused to proceed to its consideration at present

Mr Robinson then called up his resolution introduced yesterday, discharging the Foreign Affairs Committee from further consideration of the subject of the imprisonment of American citizens abroad

Mr Robinson, of New York, delivered one of his characteristic speeches and review the facts relative to the imprisonment abroad of American citizens If the present resolution was adopted he had others he would offer These were in effect that the President be authorized and instructed to take such proceedings in the enforcement of the demands on the British Government as designated in the law of July 27th 1868 and further that Minister Lowell be recalled. "I say fight," said Robinson "if England refuses to comply with our demands"

Mr Orth, member of Foreign Affairs Committee said this was a most delicate matter and begged the House to inform itself of the true state of the case before discharging the committee from its consideration He defended their course in the matter and declared not one hour had been lost in attempting to assert the rights of American citizens in Ireland. He said one man included in the resolution was not an American citizen and another at the time of the arrest was holding office under Government of Great Britain.

Mr Dunster, also a member of the committee, followed in a similar vein. Negotiations are still going on by cable, and if the House would forbear even till next week his committee hoped to be able to report back a bill with the intelligence that the American prisoners had been released.

Mr Cox offered as a substitute for Mr Robinson's resolution one calling on the President for any additional correspondence with the British Government on file in the State Department and requesting the President to continue his efforts for the prompt trial or release of American citizens unjustly confined in Ireland.

After further debate Mr Robinson withdrew his resolution and that offered by Mr Cox was adopted.

Adjourned.

Bribery Investigation.

BOSTON, April 25 The committee to which was referred the charge that a member of the House had been offered a bribe in the shape of a pass by a representative of the Boston & Maine Railroad, to influence his vote in the matter of allowing said road to maintain elevated tracks between Somerville and Boston, met to-day. Allen, of Lynn, who made the charge, said Robinson, of New Bedford, had said to him he did not accept any pass although he felt he was the one referred to and did not want his name used in the matter. Robinson when he had been solicited to vote for the measure said he was not only under obligation to other roads but also opposed to the bill. He had then been told if he would vote for the bill or abstain from voting against it a pass over the Boston & Maine road would be given him. During the afternoon Robinson urged him to stop the matter where it was as he was anxious to avoid being involved in such a matter, and moreover the person, whose name he would not disclose, was anxious to avoid invidious publicity. Allen then asked Robinson to set the matter right but that gentleman refused to do anything in the matter if he could help it, and asserted he should deny any conversations such as those in which the charge had been made had occurred.

Since that time a certain Frank E Tucker, a lawyer representing Robinson, had approached him in the same manner and for he same purpose. He did not propose to rest under the insinuation that he had made a statement "out of whole cloth." On cross examination he said he was first approached by Mr. Williams, of Ipswich whom he believed to be employed by the Eastern Railroad. Mr Williams did not at first say to whom the pass would be offered nor did he name the person by whom the pass had been offered. When he brought him and Robinson together he said to him Robinson was the man. He also had been told by Mr Ware, counsel of the Boston & Maine, that an offer of a pass had been made, but not with the intent to bribe members The investigation was suspended until to-morrow.

Emerson Improving.

BOSTON, April 25. Ralph Waldo Emerson's condition at midnight was slightly improved over that reported twenty hours ago.

Kidder Murder Trial.

SPRINGFIELD, April 25 The government put in all their evidence in the Kidder murder trial this afternoon and Henry C Bliss opened the case for the prisoner, outlining the defence. An attempt will be made to prove that strong provocation caused the murder; that Dwight Kidder received a blow from his brother just before he shot him; that he had carried a pistol for years and the deed was not premeditated The case will probably be finished to-morrow

CONNECTICUT

The Malley Murder Trial

NEW HAVEN, April 25 At the opening of the Malley trial, to day, State Attorney Doolittle stated that the State expected to show that James Malley, with the aid of Walter Malley and Blanche Douglass ruined Jennie Cramer and then still with the aid of the other accused poisoned her with arsenic to end her importunities that James marry her and to prevent disclosures which they feared on her parts.

The taking of testimony began. The first witness was John J Hauser. He said on Aug 5th at about noon he saw James Malley, Jr, on the green in this city with a lady whom the witness could not describe. The cross-examination developed nothing material.

Edward A. Tuttle civil engineer, was produced and explained a map of the locality where the body was found.

Asa Curtis testified to finding the body of Jennie Cramer in the water and believed the girl died before she was placed in the water. An odor resembling chloroform came from the mouth when discovered.

Afternoon Session

The court opened with the resumption of Curtis' cross-examination but nothing new was elicited

Doctors Shepherd and Painter, of West Haven, were examined, both of whom expressed the convict on the girl had been choked until a very short period before her death. Their opinion was the girl had been violated. Shepard said from the appearance of the body it was his opinion death did not result from drowning. He based his opinion upon the fact that there was no water in the lungs; that she was found on her face; that there was absence of goosefleshing and by other signs. Without examining other witnesses the court adjourned.

INDIAN OUTRAGES.

Forty Persons Killed.

TUCSON, April 25. Correspondents at Safford's give an account of the recent Indian attack from which it appears that extreme cruelty was practiced by the Indians on their victims, in several cases beating their brains out with stones. The Indians declared they were going to take San Carlos Agency to kill off the whites and would kill all the whites in the valley.

The whole motive was revenge for the three Indians recently executed at Fort Grant. Later news from the front is that the whole force of about 300, including women and children are being closely pursued southward by the cavalry. Not less than 40 persons have been killed.

Official Report.

WASHINGTON, April 25. Col. Forsyth's official report of the encounter with the Indians, places his loss at five killed and five wounded, Two of the enemy are known to have been killed and a number wounded The Indians occupied impregnable positions, from which it was impossible to dislodge them without great loss and he gave up the attempt Their number was between 60 and 90.

A Serious Charge.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 25, A Lordsburg despatch says Col. Forsyth's command seems to be taking matters easy and allowing the Indians every opportunity to escape. It is reported that Gen. McKenzie is enroute to join Forsyth and take command in person

KENDALL NOTE COMPANY.

A Statement from the Arrested Member

RICHMOND, April 25. Kendal, of the Kendall Bank Note Company, for whose arrest a warrant was issued yesterday at the instance of Auditor Allen, who charges him with attempting to bribe him, submitted to the Board of Sinking Fund Commissioners to-day an affidavit in which he gave a history of the transaction. He says in the interview with Auditor Allen the latter expressed an unwillingness toward giving the contract to the Kendall Company, saying his (Allen's) party were under obligation to the American Bank Note Company for the sum of $5,000, advanced to help Senator Mahone in his political campaign, that certain members of his (Allen's) party had sold short the bonds of the State and might be interested in not having readjustment of the State debt proceeded with, that Allen said it was customary, he believed, to make certain rebates in engraving contracts, and he might influence, by means the giving of the contract, mentioning a sum of $1,000, distinctly stating that a present "for his trouble" would not be objectionable Kendal gave $1,000 bail.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The Case of Lamson.

LONDON, April 25. In the House of Lords to day Earl Granville quoted precedents where the British Government had made representations similar to those made by the United States in the Lamson case The United States, he said, did not interfere with English administration of justice, but merely intimated there might be cause for clemency Generally a fortnight was allowed for consideration in such cases, but as the evidence in this case came from the United States the time was somewhat extended. Had the United States interfered with the British municipal law no language would be too strong to resent the indignity but no Minister would undertake the responsibility of declining to listen to a statement that important information was forthcoming in the case of a man condemned to death

The Marquis of Salisbury spoke in a similar strain.

THE PENOBSCOT SAVINGS BANK is now established in its new quarters over the Kenduskeag National Bank. An examination of the large and commodious apartments in which this well known institution is doing business impresses one most favorably. The office is large, verious windows furnish bountiful light and the general arrangement of everything is highly satisfactory. The counters are of cherry and are excellent and beautiful in workmanship, being very artistically ornamented. Bronzed iron lattice work surmounts the counters to prevent intruders from gaining access to the inner office. The ceiling is very prettily decorated and the floor is carpeted with linoleum. The vault is very secure and rests directly on the vault of the Kenduskeag National Bank. The vault was built by the Hall Safe and Lock Company and is absolutely safe against fire and burglars. The Penobscot Savings Bank is a flourishing institution and has led a prosperous career since its organization in 1869. Amos M. Roberts, Esq, was President up to the time of his death and Gorham L. Boynton, Esq, has since officiated in that office. Mr. Edwin Clark, the efficient Treasurer, has held the position since the bank was started. AMUSEMENTS

Lecture by Mr. French

The third in the series of lectures by Mr Harry W. French was given in the Opera House last evening before the largest audience which has thus far assembled at these lectures The address proved one of great interest and was thoroughly enjoyed by all assembled The subject of the evening's effort was "Across the Sea, from Milan to Cairo" The speaker after a brief but eloquent introduction commenced his journey and the audience followed him in his wanderings with intense pleasure So much ground was covered in the short time of an hour and twenty minutes that we could not enumerate the various scenes without going into details much more than we care to. Prominent attention was given to Jerusalem, the Nile and Venice and some of the illustrations were especially beautiful and their appearance on the curtain was greeted by applause. These lectures continue to grow in interest and it is anticipated that the one on Friday evening will surpass all the previous ones. The subject on that occasion will be "Beneath the Himalayas."

DEATH OF JOHN DORR, ESQ

[Howard Owen in Kennebec Journal]

Another of our venerable and well known citizens, John Dorr, Esq, passed to his rest, Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Dorr was born in Hallowell, Jan. 21st, 1779, and was consequently in the 84th year of his age His father, Wm. Dorr, was, for 30 years, Deputy Inspector for Gardiner, Hallowell and Augusta. The subject of this sketch attended the town schools, and on the 27th of June, 1814, entered the office of the American Advocate, Hallowell, as an apprentice to the printing business The paper was published by Nathaniel Cheever. Finishing his trade in 1821, young Dorr went to Boston, and worked as a compositor on the Boston Daily Advertiser In the fall of that year he went to Wiscasset and established the Lincoln Intelligencer, a whig paper In the fall of 1827, he sold out to Amos B. Tappan From 1831 to 1838 he published the Workmen's Advocate at Belfast In 1839 he came to Augusta and purchased one-half of the Kennebec Journal, becoming a partner with Luther Severance, who, with Mr. Russell Eaton, had established the paper in 1823 This co-partnership continued eleven years and nine months When Mr. Severance was sent Commissioner to the Sandwich Islands the establishment was sold to Wheeler & Simpson, Mr. Dorr retiring in 1850. But his desire to linger about a printing office still clung to him, and he was proof reader and clerk in the office during a portion of the time the paper was in the hands of Stevens & Blaine, and Stevens & Sayward. After this he was in the druggist business here for seven years, in partnership with William Craig finally retiring from business on a competency, in January, 1867 He had more than forty years of hard work as his life, often being employed at the case, while he was publisher, and doing all other kinds of work about the office, the early efforts of newspaper men in this state being rarely remunerative. He was married in 1825, and lived in the companionship of a most excellent wife for more than half a century Mrs Dorr died on the 24th of November 1876 He leaves two adopted children, Mr Geo W Dorr, of Waterville and the wife of Mr John W. Chase, of this city. In the pleasant home of the latter surrounded by plenty and all the joys calculated to smooth his pathway down the western declivity, the closing years of his life—the mellow, sunset period—have been spent

Mr Dorr was a man of extensive knowledge, and ever kept his memory well refreshed on all the current topics of the day. Holding solidly to the good old maxims and many of the customs of the past, he nevertheless hailed with joy the march of science and progress of events. His later life was luminous with Christian beneficence, and acts of charity and kindness. His Christian hope was strong, and as old age approached it grew stronger and stronger. He has often related to the writer of these lines that during a severe sickness several years since, a new revelation dawned upon his mind, and a fresh baptism of faith came to his soul This has since enabled him to walk with a clear consciousness of his acceptance by Him in whose presence he now stands ace to face

THE CENTURY.

BOUND VOLUME FOR 1881-2.

We have received a copy of the first bound volume of the Century Magazine. The printed page has been enlarged, making the volume contain nearly one hundred pages of matter more than before. The rules between the columns and at the top of the page have been taken out, leaving a blank space, which defines the columns equally well, and precludes the liability of injury to a delicate engraving on the reverse side.

The cover design is the work of Mr George F. Babb, of New York, architect and designer By opening he book and laying it face downward, the design will be seen in its entirety and the decorative relations of its different parts will be better appreciated The cover linings are also the work of Mr Babb and in these he has introduced two of M Elihu Vedder s special designs for the magazine covers

The increase in the sale of the Century has been very decided since the change in name The average edition of the last six numbers under the Scribner name was 120 200, while of the six numbers of the first Century volume no fewer than 130,000 copies have printed of any issue, and the edition of three of the numbers has exceeded 134,000

DO METERS MEASURE?

THE FALLIBILITY OF GAS OFFICES JUDICIALLY AFFIRMED

[From the Philadelphia Press]

A wise judge in New York City, after an exhaustive examination of full law authorities, has decided that gas meters are not infallible. There is not a householder in the land but who was morally certain of this fact before. It is, nevertheless, highly gratifying to have this lay opinion adopted by a judge and pronounced from the bench with all the solemnity and authority attaching to judicial conclusions. Heretofore the gas companies have had it all their own way. The mysterious little clock in the cellar always testified in their favor, and from its findings there was no appeal. An increase in the consumption of gas never failed to be registered, but any attempt at retrenchment in the particular was as often as not unattended by any decrease in the revolutions of the dial below. A total disuse of gas for a season is an economy which usually is used to the exclusive benefit of the gas companies, whose bills could only be disputed by those who were prepared to have their gas shut off and be content for a season with the illumination afforded by kerosene or candles.

General Sickles is a warrior who does not shrink from a contest, even with a gas company. He denies its right to charge him for gas during a period when he and his family were absent in Europe and no gas was burned on his premises. He denies, further, the right of the company to remove the meter from his house and shut off the gas because he refuses to pay for gas which was never burned. On this latter point he goes into court and asks and obtains an injunction against the gas company which proposed to leave him in darkness. Judge Lawrence decided that the question whether a person is in arrears for gas is not to be decided by the company, but, where it is disputed, by a jury, and until such arrears are ascertained the company is not at liberty to shut off the supply of gas from the house of the person contesting the bill. The gas company is therefore, restrained from executing its threat to leave General Sickles's house in darkness, and is obliged to refer to a jury of the village the question whether the modest figures are to be accepted against the oaths of the General and his family.

An oppressed and down-trodden people will hail this act of General Sickles with grateful acclaim Should the law as laid down in this case be affirmed and accepted by the bench generally, it will be a triumph for the warrior plaintiff which will far surpass in glory and magnitude any honors gained by him in the field of arms We have been under the heel of the gas companies long enough By virtue of their writs of alternative mandamus, saying, "pay the bill or dwell in darkness," they have for years intimidated every community Hereafter they will have to justify to juries of householders and gas burners the workings of those mysterious meters which register as rapidly when a house is closed and unoccupied as when every burner is in full blaze It is a great victory, and if its influence will extend to Philadelphia our citizens will unite with their glad brethren of New York in shouting glad hosannas for this triumph over a common enemy.

PERSONAL AND MISCELLANEOUS

Miss Lilian Taylor, daughter of the lamented poet, has lately translated with great success two of Mr Edwin Booth's acting plays into the German, receiving a thousand dollars for the work Mr Booth will use this translation during his German engagement next summer.

While constructing a new foundation for an old building in Philadelphia, recently, the workmen struck a crock which contained a large amount of gold and silver coins, worth several thousand dollars It is supposed the treasure was buried during the Revolution to protect it from the British

Ex Secretary Blaine, Thomas Ewing, of Ohio, and Senator Davis of West Virginia, have formed a syndicate to purchase the Washington and Ohio Railroad, which will be a short line between Washington and Cincinnati This railroad will open extensive coal beds owned by the syndicate in Virginia

Two newsboys in the pursuit of their vocation, in Harlem, last week, shouted that the papers they were selling contained reports of a great calamity A swindled purchaser caused their arrest and they were fined ten dollars each And it served them right, too. Misrepresentation, whether it be by the crying of false news or the publication of sensational headlines or editorial lies, is a positive injury to the business of any newspaper, and if it were not, it is a fraud upon the public that ought not to be tolerated

Mr Longfellow in September, 1880, told James Grant Wilson that of all his poetical writings he preferred "Evangeline" and in a letter addressed to General Wilson in 1869 the poet writes, "You are wrong in supposing 'Evangeline' to have been suggested by the 'Neutral French' of Mrs Williams The story was told to me—that is the bare outline of it—by a friend of Hawthorne, who had been urging him to write a tale on the subject I said to Hawthorne, 'I wish you would give it to me for a poem' He did so immediately not seeming to care about it, nor desiring to write on the theme"

[From Andrew's American Queen]

QUEEN OF SHEBA'S BEAUTY

Was But Skin Deep.

The renowned Queen of Sheba, with all her royal pomp, magnificent apparel and brilliant retinue, would never have appeared within the presence of the grandeest of the monarchs of the past had she not also possessed that which is the crowning glory of the female person—a skin unchallenged for its Oriental softness and its almost transcendental purity Cleopatra holding emperors at bay, and ruling empires by her word, had quickly lost her charm and power by one attack of blotches, of pimples, or of horrid tan and freckles

WOMAN RULES THE WORLD

by her beauty, not less than by her purity of character, loveliness of disposition and unselfish devotion Indeed, in the estimation of perhaps too many men beauty in a body takes precedence over every other consideration Beauty thus forms an important part of Woman's "working capital," without which too many, if not bankrupts in what relates to influence within the circle where they move, are powerless for great good Hence we see not only the propriety but the duty of every lady preserving with zealous care that which to her is essential to success and influence and usefulness in life And since "beauty is but skin deep," the utmost care and vigilance are required to guard it against the many ills that flesh is heir to Among the great and annoying enemies of beauty

OF BRITISH SKY

as well as of comfort, happiness and health are those pestiferous and horrid skin disease Blotches, humors eczema, (salt rheum) rough and scaly eruptions, ulcers, pimples and all diseases of the hair and scalp For the cure of all these Dr C W Benson of Baltimore, after years of patient study and investigation devoted to diseases of the skin, at last brought forth his celebrated SKIN CURE which has already by its marvelous cures, established itself as the great remedy for all diseases of the skin, whatever be their name or character Its success has been unprecedented and unparalleled All druggists have it It is sold in two bottles in one package Internal and external treatment Price $1 00
